Abstract

Russian immigrant Dr. Boris is the deputy mayor of the town of Kiryat Shmona. On March 2015, he campaigns for the national elections, supporting the ultra-nationalist party Israel Beitenu. At this occasion, we follow him in the organisation of the campaign, meeting with residents and fellow politicians, bridging between the Russian-speaking community he represents, and the Israeli society where he settled, under the shadow of xenophobic politics.

Abstract

In a suburb of Auxerre (France), the three old towers erected in the early 1960's gave way to small houses. Inside, inhabitants tell me this movement. What it conveys of breaks. What it transports of continuity - that of a common condition, all in all popular, and alive.
